At the Fari Islands Festival 2026 at Patina Maldives, Sean Wotherspoon introduced “Respect the Reef,” a collaboration that brought together creativity and environmental conservation. Through the reinterpretation of vintage fashion and the creation of ceramic sculptures designed to support coral reef restoration, the project explored the connection between creativity and environmental preservation.

Now, the collaboration moves from the waters of the Maldives to Osaka. Drawing inspiration from Japanese craftsmanship, vintage culture, and the country's appreciation for the changing seasons, Sean reimagines the beauty of autumn through his distinctive nostalgic and playful perspective.

Inspired by his deep interest in Japanese culture and his personal experience of staying at Patina Osaka, Sean brings his unique vision of autumn to life through fashion, art, and culinary experiences.

■ The Patina Pumpkin by SW - Made from the Past to Tell Stories of Today

A large-scale sculpture titled "The Patina Pumpkin by SW," created by the creative team SuperZoo under the creative direction of Sean Wotherspoon, will be unveiled in Patina Osaka's Entrance Gallery.

Crafted in Tokyo, the sculpture features a wooden structure incorporating Japanese BORO textiles dating back approximately 200 years, alongside vintage American fabrics. By bringing together materials from different eras and cultures, the artwork connects stories of the past with the present, embodying the creative relationship between Patina and Sean Wotherspoon.

The sculpture is expected to remain on display at the hotel beyond the conclusion of the collaboration.

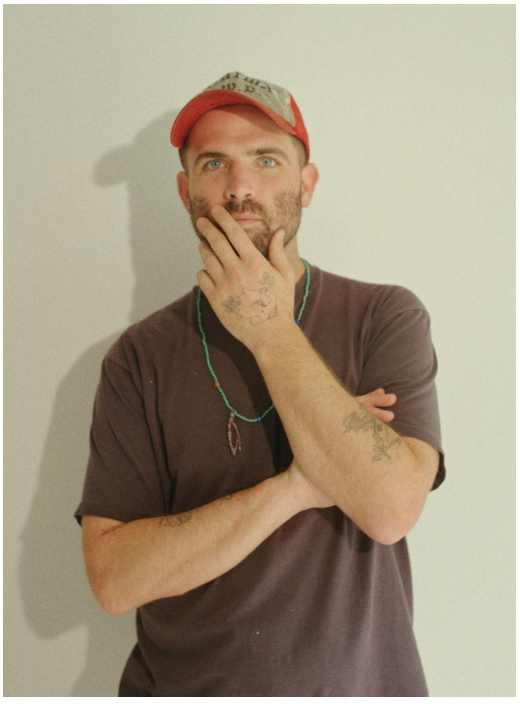
■ Fall Into Patina - P72 Vegan Seasonal Menu

Bringing together Sean's plant-based lifestyle as a vegan and P72's culinary philosophy, rooted in close relationships with local farmers and producers, the collaboration introduces “Fall Into Patina,” a special vegan course inspired by Southern comfort food.

Featuring seasonal autumn vegetables sourced from local farms, the menu celebrates regional ingredients and culinary traditions while expressing appreciation for the season's bounty and respect for local producers. The experience reflects Patina Osaka's distinctive farm-to-table dining philosophy.



■ Comment from Sean Wotherspoon

“SW & Patina are rooted in ‘respect’. In the Maldives we were respecting the reef, in Osaka, we are respecting tradition and storytelling through an artistic and culinary experience carefully curated around the beauty of Autumn & Patina Osaka together.”

— Sean Wotherspoon
